ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. BOSTON, May 13 .- The ball tossers from the Smoky City came to the Hub to-day and undertook to give the bean-eaters a few points about baseball, but, although they put up a strong game, it was not strong enough to carry them to victory. Manager Phillips showed the people at the Hub, however, that he had a team of hustlers, and it was only good playing that kept the Bostons from taking a longer lead. Three thousand five hundred people welcomed the visitors, and the attendance would have been large but for the cold east wind that kept all but the dyed-in-the-wool cranks at home.

Billy Nash took his old place at third base his nose having resumed its natural size. The fracture is not yet healed, but Nash is too much of a ball player to sit on the bench when his services are needed, and they were needed to-day.

HART WAS AFRAID.

The fact that Manager Hart put his strongest team in the field showed that he rated the Pittsburg players as dangerous opponents. The result of the game showed the correctness of his theory for his bean-eating constituents crossed the plate on the final spurt only two points ahead. It looked as though the Bostons would have an easy time up to the third in-ning, but the tide turned against them after that inning and they had to hustle to save themselves from defeat.

The Bostons were the first to take up the stick and they used it with good effect in the first inning. Staley pitched good ball and resorted to all the arts known to the twirler, yet the Boston sluggers sized him up for three hits, which with three errors yielded three runs. Brown opened the game with a neat single to right and Johnson followed with another to left. Staley grew pervous at the thought that odated the high-priced Michawith a base on balls. Then big Dan Brouthers sh red his right to the rank of leader of the League by landing the ball safe in the field and two earned runs were scored, Kelly reaching

KELLY DANCED ABOUT. He danced about until Brouthers started for second, and then, as Foghern Miller threw the hall, Kelly started for the plate. If Miller's throw had been accurate the chances are that Kells would have been out, but as the ball was widely thrown the third run was scored for

In the third inning there was another season of run getting for the home nine. After Kelly of run getting for the home nine. After Kelly had retired on an easy bounder to Dunlap, Brouthers increased his average by getting in another single to right field. Richardson made a good attempt to advance him, but Hanlon, the invincible, was in center field, and Hardle retired in confusion. Staley took pity on Nash and gave him four bad balls. It was a case of mispinced confidence, for Quinn lifted the ball into a remote portion of the right field, and increased the Boston's lead to five. This scared the visitors a little, and they took counsel how they might put an end to that style of playing. Miller, Smith and Dunlap did some good work in the fourth inning, and the onward career of the Bostons was checked for the time being. In the fifth one more run was added to Boston's score by means of two singles and a passed ball, making the score 6 to 0.

They Started To Bat.

THEY STARTED TO BAT. But it did not long remain in that ratio But it did not long remain in that ratio. When the visitors went to the bat in their half of the sixth inning they took their liveliest bats with them, and the result was two earned runs. Smith struck out. Then Staley bunted the ball and reached first in safety. Billy Sunday made his second hit of the game, a neat drive just beyond short, and both men were safe. Hanlon advanced both by his heroic sacrifice to Brouthers, relying upon Beckley to bring them home. The sturdy first baseman shouldered the responsibility, and a corking hit to center field did the work. When the eighth inning arrived the Pittsburgers took another lease of life and added three runs to their score, thereby making the bean-eaters feel decidedly uncomfortable. Quinn's fumble gave fleet-footed Sunday his base, and Hanlon could not advance him any. Beckley came to the rescue once more with another single, and Dunlay's sacrifice grounder to Richardson prevented a double play. Miller punctured a hole in the sky with a fly and Mr. Kelly was so interested in looking at the hole that he dropped the ball. Result, two runs. Then Maul took a brace and banged the ball for such a long single into center field that Miller reached the plate by a lively sprint from first. That made the score 6 to 5 in favor of Boston. It was too close for comfort and the Bostons added one more to their score on a single, two sacrifices and a wild throw by Beckley to shut off Kelly at second. Kelly would have scored on that throw if Hanlou had not shut him off at the plate by a mighty throw that raised a shout of approval. The visitors were quickly retired in the ninth. THE BROOKLYN HANDICAP.

What an Eastern Authority Says About Hapover's Chance. Referring to Hanover's chance to win the Brooklyn handicap to-morrow the New York Herald says: Unless Hanover wins the Brooklyn handicap on Wednesday there will be many an empty purse in this city and in other cities in various parts of this broad land, and the bookmakers will have reaped a golden harvest. It is doubtful whether in the history of ante-post betting there has ever been a horse which has been so universally and unquestionably a favorite as the chestnut son of Hindoo has been for this event during the last two weeks since The Bard was declared out by Mr. Cassatt. Before the was declared out by Mr. Cassatt. Before the withdrawal of the champion of Chesterbrook it was an open question in the minds of the public whether The Bard would repeat his performance of a year ago, and again vanquish the Dwyers' representative, or whether Hanover would turn the tables on his mighty conqueror. Each had a following of "turfies" equally enthusiastic, with the betting a shade in favor of The Bard. But with him out it is hard to find a man who is not willing to concede the present man who is not willing to concede the present probability of Hanover landing the stakes, unless it is the few who have placed their money at longer odds on less considered horses. The latest indications are that the Dwyers will The latest indications are that the Dwyers will try to clinch their mortgage on the big handicap by starting Inspector B in addition to Hanover, and there are those who say that this other cripple will have more than a fighting chance of winning. The Inspector has done some of the best preliminary work that has been seen at Gravesend this spring.

LOUISVILLE'S MOVE.

The Jockey Club's Fight With the Wester Bookmakers' Association. PEPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH, J

LOUISVILLE, May 13.—The following sumions was sent to James Palmer, President of the Western Bookmakers' Association, by Colonel M. Lewis Clark, President of the Louisville Jockey Club, to-day: "You are hereby summoned to appear before the Executive mittee of the Louisville Jockey Club, at their office in this city, to-morrow morning why your association should not be ruled off the track for endeavoring to prevent bookmakers from going on our track, and other causes." W. H. Landeman, Secretary of that organization, also had a similar document served on him. The cause of the action of the club is a belief upon their part that a conspiracy against the Louisville Jockey Club by the Western Bookmakers' Association is going on, and they propose to sift the matter to the bottom.

The bookmakers say they are ready to meet on any ground, but many believe if the Louisville Jockey Club force a fight that other Western associations will take it up and it will not be long before the sounding of the death knell of the bookmakers' organization. The matter is being freely discussed in circles where it is already known, and from present prospect it will be the food for the turf gossip here at least for several days. association should not be ruled off the track

BUSINESS MEN KICK

Are Weary of Prohibition.

Does Not Increase. IT OUGHT TO BE IN UNIVERSAL FORCE

In Order to Do Any Good, According to the Opinion Generally Expressed.

ATCHISON, KAN., May 13.-This city has had a sufficiently long trial of prohibition to bring all its leading citizens to one mind and that is, that such an experiment is decidedly disastrous to business. Thirteen railroads enter Atchison, and from its geographical position it ought to be a distributing center for Kansas, Southern Nebrasks, Colorado and a portion of Missouri as well. It has some large wholesale houses, but none of them report business rushing. While Kansas has been experimenting with prohibition, and thereby retarding the growth of her cities, Kansas City and St. Joseph, in Missouri, and Omaha, in Nebraska, have been pushing ahead at an astonishing rate, and leaving Atchison and Leavenworth, their old rivals, far in the Atchison has not grown a bit during the past eight years, since prohibition went into effect, though it has improved considerably. Stores which formerly brought $1,000 a year rent now stand idle, awaiting a tenant at $200. The place has a very quiet, not to say dead look, quite unlike what one expects to find in a well established Western city.

Talks with leading men show that they are almost to a man opposed to prohibition, and that they consider that it has hurt

VIEWS OF A DEMOCRATIC PROHIB. B. P. Waggener, the leading lawyer of Atchison, and the general counsel for the Missouri Pacific Railroad system, was one of Missouri Pacino Railroad system, was one of the few Democrats who publicly advocated prohibition when it was adopted.

"I am now convinced that it is a failure," said he, in speaking of its effects. "It is impracticable in cities, and has done a great deal to retard business and immigration. I hear that at Castle Garden the agents of other States are quick to make known Kansas prohibition laws to new comers and induce them not to come here. Then it builds up a system of spies, of joints and of general hypocrisy, all of which are bad for the ommunity.

"Prohibition in Kansas is really what has "Prohibition in Kansas is really what has given such a boom to Kansas City, in Missouri. It drove out of this State a great many wholesale dealers, and others who went to that city and began to boom it. The result is that is has now gone far beyond any place in Kansas, and no city in this State can hope to rival it. Then, too, prohibition has depreciated values here. A good many people who don't belive in such laws, but who are orderly and law observing, have moved away, preferring to go to ing, have moved away, preferring to go to other cities where there is no such restriction on their liberty." IT KNOCKS OUT BUSINESS.

Ex-Mayor Kelsey, a Republican who has just retired from office, expressed the same views. He is a large furniture dealer. "Prohibition has knocked out business," said he, "and the people of Atchison have no confidence in its future. The business that was here has gone to Omaha, to Kansas City and St. Joseph, where they don't have such laws. There is very little now to attract havers to Atchison when they can to attract buyers to Atchison when they can do equally well in other cities and have a much more enjoyable time. I myself would have gone last spring if it had not been for the lease of my store. While it has hurt business, prohibition has not stopped drunkenness. There is more whisky drink ng now than ever, and I think ing now than ever, and I think there is more private drinking in houses. If a man wants liquor he does not have to go to a 'joint,' but he can just telephone across the river to East Atchison, in Missouri, and it will be brought to his house."

Mr. Pride, a large wholesale druggist, who has done a great deal toward building up Atchison, told the same tale of business lost and pownletted driver away by the lost and population driven away by the op-eration of prohibition.

OUGHT TO BE UNIVERSAL. "If prohibition were universal," said he, "if Congress should make it a law applying to the whole country, it would be all right. But when a State has prohibition, and those surrounding it have high license or some surrounding it have high license or some other liberal system, the latter catch all the business. It has been so with Kansas, and it will be so with Pennsylvania if she adopts that policy. Philadelphia will find that her business will go to New York, Baltimore and cities in other States, and that she will gain nothing. Prohibition will kill her dead."

will gain nothing. Prohibition will kill her dead."

Mr. Pride is a graduate of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, and a frequent visitor to the East. He understands business conditions thoroughly, and is well posted as to the workings of prohibition in Kansas. His advice to the people of Pennsylvania is to reject prohibition entirely if they desire to continue to prosper and to hold their own in the never-ceasing compe-

CAUSES AND RESULTS

In continuing the series of chapters relating personal experiences place is given to the following, furnished by a gentleman well-known in Pittsburg as a skillful artist

Mr. Fred Bunselmeyer has lived for some time at 6022 Broad street, Pittsburg, and it was here that the writer found him. "I don't know," said Mr. Bunselmeyer,

"as my experience would be of great inte est to any outside of a few friends, but such as it is I am entirely willing to give it. It may be of service to others who suffered as I did from bronchial and catarrhal trouble. "How long? Well, that is hard to say. It had been coming on so gradually I could hardly say when it commenced. I can hardly remember the time when I didn't have more or less trouble in my throat and "I thought it was only a slight cold at first, and paid no attention to it. After a time I found my throat continually filling up. Mucus would drop back into it. It would get sore and raw, and I would have to be continually hemming and hawking to went to bed. The condition of my head and throat got worse steadily. I was always hawking and hemming and raising. At night especially the mucus would drop back into my throat and fill up so that I could hardly breathe.

"I would have a dull refer to the county."

"I would have a dull pain in my forehead over the eyes. There would be a sense of over the eyes. There would be a sense of weight and oppression on my chest. The catarrh seemed to be extending all over. My appetite got poor. Food did not seem to have the proper taste. I seemed to be losing the sense of taste and smell. I would have a bad taste in my mouth, and spells of dizzness and nausea.

"Well, I suppose it is needless to describe all these things. Anyone who has suffered from a catarrhal trouble knows what they are. I could see that I was steadily getting aworse all the time and I was really alarmed about myself. I had tried various remedies, but to no purpose. "Reading in the papers the case of a Mr. Fred. Tielke, which seemed to be like mine, and who had been cured by Drs. Copeland & Blair I concluded to go to them myself.

"I found that their charges were reasonable and within my means, and placed myself under their care."

and within my means, and placed myself under their care."

"With what result?"

"Well, I improved from the start; slowly and steadily my head and throat became clear. I grew stronger and better, eat more and slept well. Today Lieel like a different person, and I am quite willing to make this statement.

Mr. Bunselmeyer, as stated, lives at 6022 Broad street, Pittsburg. He will be recognized in the portrait which accompanies this sketch.

FROM A BUSINESS MAN.

A Typical Case and a Notable and Complet Result. The following characteristic statement is given by Mr. C. C. Brooks, a well known business man, living at No. 36 Magnolia

"I had been troubled with catarrh for 20 years, and suffered with all its disagreeable symptoms. My nose was stopped, first on one side and then the other; sometimes both sides would be entirely closed. My throat was sore, and often so tender I gould scarcely swallow, and it would constantly fill up with mucus. I seemed to catch cold without any exposure, and had one succession of colds every winter. Up to four years ago the trouble seemed to be confined to my nose and throat. About that time, however, I noticed that my trouble was extending.

"I had a continual backing cough which annoyed me day and night. I could neither annoyed me day and night. I could neither sleep nor eat with any comfort. Frequently I would wake up coughing during the night and my food seemed to do me absolutely no good. I felt nervous and despondent.

"About a year ago I gave out entirely. My nose was in very bad condition. My throat and bronchial tubes would fill up so that it was always impossible for me to that it was almost impossible for me to breathe. I would have coughing spells that would leave me covered with a cold perspiration and so weak I could scarcely stand. There were sharp pains in my chest and back, under the shoulder blades that were almost unbearable.

"I did everything I could for them, and in fact for my whole trouble, but got no relief. I had night sweats, and would get up in the morning thoroughly tired out.
"You will perhaps realize what a hold I lost 15 pounds in two weeks.

"As a last resort I went to the mountains of Tennessec. After remaining there five months, although I felt slightly better, there seemed to be no hope of my recov-

While there I read in the papers state ments of patients whose cases were similar to mine, although not so severe, who had been cured by Dr. Blair. They made such a strong impression on me that I decided to return home and be treated. "I was told that I could not live if I did, but persisted, contrary to the advice of my friends

"That was my condition and prospects when My nose and throat are clear. My throat is no longer sore. The pains in my chest disap-peared. The night sweats ceased. I am now able to get a good refreshing night's sleep, and get up feeling rested. I have gained in strength and weight, and now it does not seem possible that at one time I had given up all hopes of re-covery." covery.

Mr. Brooks, says the Boston Herald, is well known in business circles. As stated, he resides at 36 Magnolia st., and this interview can easily be verified.
